JUST ONE HUNDRED TO-DAY.

MAJOR HARWARD PASSES THE CENTURY LIKE A YOUTH OF FIFTY.

He Was a Farmer Boy in Maloe and Has Built Sixty Ships A Veteran Here of the War of 1812-A Testimonial and Brooklyn Friends.

Major Thomas Harward is receiving many callers and hearty congratulations to-day at his brown-stone residence, 245 Carlton ave

The Major is celebrating in a quiet, social way his one hundredth birthday.

He gave the hand of an Evening Works reporter a firm grasp when he paid his com-pliments this morning. The grasp was that of a hearty and apparently middle-aged man. Major Harward wore an easy breakfast coat of black velvet, broadcloth trousers and a smile that was pleasant to see. He was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Harward, a delightful woman with an abundance of soft white hair, confined in a knot from which hung a bunch of curls.

"I am in first rate health," replied the Major to a question, "except that I have been bothered for a day or two with rheumatic pains in my wrists.

"Yes : I was born in a white frame house on my father's farm at Bowdoinham, Me., on March 15, 1789. I was a farmer-boy till I was sixteen or eighteen, and then I went into the lumber business for a few years. At twenty Inmber business for a few years. At twentyfive I began to build and own ships, at first at the old home, and afterwards at Bath. I built sixty ships.

"I continued at shipbuilding till the c'ose of the last war, and in 1868 I came to Brookiva, since which time I have been engaged in the real-astate business. I own nine or ten houses in Brooklyn, and I den't know what else. Years ago I built a store just above Grand street, on Broadway, New York, but the rest of my real estate is in Brooklyn.

"Yes, I am comfortably well off. I do not want. I lost about $75,000 through a New York house when I was in the shipping business, though."

"When Washington died you were ten years old," said the reporter. "Do you remember the arrival of the news at Bowdonham? And what was the impression upon your boyish mind?"

"I guess they sever heard of it in Maine," chuckled the old gentleman.

"I had a hand in the war of 1812-1815, I was a private in the State malitia, and we were called out in the coast-defense service.
I was promoted to a lieutenancy, but I am entitled to be majored through having commanded a company of dragoons after that war.

"What rules have preserved you to this

"What rules have preserved you to this ripe old age?" asked the reporter.
"Never used tobacco in any form; pever used spirits except for medicine, and always attended to my business, as I do now," re-

"Never used tobacco in any form; never used spirits except for medicine, and always steemed to my business, as I do now," replied the ancient,

Major Harward has always been and still is a strict business man. In early life he married and two children were born to him. One of them—Mrs. L. H. Ferkins—is still living. Her home is at the Albermarie Hotel, this city. The other, Thomas Harward, was twenty-five years old, when he went to the Black Sea in 1864. He fell overboard and was drowned. The wife died before that.

Twenty years ago, when the Major was a youth of eighty Summers, he formed a second martial alliance with with the Widow Merrill see Brazier, of Portland, Me. She is forty-five years his junior.

Major Harward comes of long-lived stock. His mother died at minety-six and his brother, George lived to the same age. Every Summer he goes back to the old homestead to spend the hot months.

He was one of the founders of the Winter Street Congregational Church, Bath, and is still a communicant of that church, though in Brooklyn he attends Dr. Cuyler's Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church, to the Sunday-school library of which he made a substantial gift on his minety-sixth birthday.

He has received a memorial booklet, ountaining finely engrossed compliments of the occasion and the signatures of Dr. Cuyler and 100 officers and teachers of the Sunday-school.

On one of the pages of the booklet is this; We, the officers and teachers of the Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church Sunday-school, do

We, the officers and teachers of the Lafayette

most heartily congratulate our venerable friend and fellow church member, Major Thomas Harward, born March 15, 1789, at Bordomham, Mas. on his centeunial.

Unlike the American aloe that survives an hundred years, then blossoms but once and dies, our century plant has not awaited the expiration of that period, but has put forth its blossoms at nearer intervals to please with their beauty and fragrance.

The Major is in the full possession of every faculty, and in his energy, cannot wait patiently for a street car to stop, but hope off while it is in motion, much to the distress and perturbation of his friends. He says it ought to be easy to live a hundred years from now.

Amiong his callers to-day have been Dr. Ouylor, Charles H. Beebe, Daniel W. Mc Williams, Jesse L. Gosslar, Timothy C. Cronin, J. Dr. Matthews and Daniel D. Hinckley.

COLD COMFORT FOR THE LIEDERKRANZ. Capt. Relliy Reports, Denying Police Mis-conduct at the Ball.

Capt. Thomas Reilly, of the "Tenderloin" Precinct, to-day made his official report to Acting Supt. Byrnes on the charges preferred by the Liederkranz Society as to the police miscondact at its ball in the Metropolitan Opera-House, Feb. 4. The charges were to the effect that the unusual number of seventy policemen, armed with night sticks, were on duty in the Opera-House, and acted in an insolent manner, that they stopped the sale of wine at 1 r. M., a privilege which has been enjoyed at other balls before and since that date, and that the police drove out of the dining-room guests who had not finished eating what they had paid for.

Capt Reilly in his report, says that he was instructed by the Superintendent to carry out the option recently rendered by Justice Danie, to the effect that no liquor or wine c. Le sold after 1 A. M. at any public place in the city, and that the mere exposure of such liquor or wine after that hour is unlawful.

The Captain says he carried out these instructions in the most courteous manner and has no knowledge of any unsolent, corrupt or outrageous conduct on the part of any of his officers.

Asting Supt. Byrnes will submit the report The charges were to the effect that the un-

Acting Supt. Byrnes will submit the report to the Police Commissioners at the meeting of the Board late this afternoon.

BRIGHT STORM PROSPECTS.

SERGT. DUNN SAYS SEVERAL ARE MOVING THIS WAY.

A remarkable change in the atmosphere was noticeable this morning, and pedestrians who had started out with their Spring overcoats hurried back indoors to exchange them for heavier ones. The advance guard of the cold wave struck the towr during the early hours of morning, and proceeded to make things lively.

The storm which formed yesterday on the South Atlantic coast was central over South Carolina, and is now moving slowly up the poast in this direction.

It is blowing a gale, and there were heavy rains. What we had this morning was only a taste of what is to come. According to the wise man of the Weather Bureau, Sergt. Dunn, the weather here today will be cool and windy. There may be rain this afternoon. There is another storm moving this way from the West. It is now central over Kansas, but is not likely to reach here until our Southern visitor has left us.

Should the two meet, which is not probable, New Yorkers might be treated to another blizzard, such as was experienced a year ago. It blew at the rate of twenty-eight miles here in New York this morning, and at Block Island forty-eight miles was the registered rate of speed.
